We must do more than vote

Give a few hours

We need to get active, reach out to other voters, and encourage them to vote for candidates who value government instead of trying to destroy vital services.

"As state workers we are in a unique position because we can elect our bosses," said Local 1000 President Yvonne Walker. "But a great responsibility comes with that – we need to elect leaders who understand the importance of the work we do and value the workers who keep the state running."

Give a few dollars

All of the decisions that affect us as state employees are made by politicians.

We need public officials who will stand up for the issues that matter most to state employees. Together, we can work to elect politicians who will support state services and quality jobs.

Now, more than ever, politics matters – and we need a strong, united voice. And that takes money. When you contribute to the Local 1000 Committee on Political Education (COPE), we can elect candidates who will respect our valuable contribution to the quality of life in California, while avoiding political attacks in the form of furloughs, minimum wage and threats to our pensions and job security.
