

Local 1000 Governance

Members

Union members elect the people who develop and carry out union policies. Many members take training to be stewards to represent co-workers, answer questions and carry out union programs in their worksites,

District Labor Council Executive Boards

Each District Labor Council (DLC) has its own officer structure and executive board (e-board). The e-board includes the DLC officers, senior stewards, and District Bargaining Unit Representatives (DBURs) for each bargaining unit found within the DLC. Every e-board member must be a steward. These offices are elected.

Statewide Bargaining Advisory Council

SBAC is the organization of DBURs and Unit 1 CBURs who are elected representatives and act as connections between the Bargaining Unit Negotiating Council (BUNC) and workers within their DLC's geographic areas. The SBACs elect their respective BUNC members.

Bargaining Unit Negotiating Council

The elected members of the nine BUNCs represent co-workers within their bargaining units on unit-wide issues and during contract negotiations with the state. BUNC members are elected by DBURs

SEIU Local 1000 Council

This is the policy-making body of Local 1000. It includes presidents of the 51 District Labor Councils (DLCs) representing specific geographic areas of California and one out-of-state DLC, plus the four statewide Local 1000 officers and nine BUNC chairs.
